PREFACE

By Alex G. Malloy

The comic industry continues to see an extended period of change. There are fewer and fewer comic shops — shop owners have had to rely on other products to help them stay in business. We have seen many comic shops close due to the flight of young comic fans in the 8–12 year old age group. The fan base has decreased as the average age of comic enthusiasts has increased. The shops that have survived are the true comic main stays. These retailers have observed that what today's collector wants is more quality in new comics. The collector now demands good story lines along with fine art. The embossed, 3-D and hologram covers and the gold or platinum editions are no longer in high demand. Even the hot "bad girl" comics are now slowing down. Reports are that they are not as popular now as they were even a few months ago. Recent back issue sales are still down, big time — so we see more stagnant prices in comics issued in the last 5 years. But with all this gloom, the main comic collector is still there. What goes down comes up and what goes up goes down. We have seen it with so many titles — the later part of the 1990s will see quality as the comic standard and what does not adhere to this standard will not exist after the turn of the millennium.

While recent back issues are not selling, the story with silver age titles is quite different. Silver age comics are selling well and the values are increasing at a steady rate. But it's the golden age comics that have shot through the roof. Finally, collectors have realized that the golden age comics are rare and warrant incredible new value levels. The age group of golden age comics collectors is generally over 40 years old, and these collectors are serious. Golden age comics from the period of 1933 to the early 1950s are rare. In most cases, there are only a handful to a few hundred of each issue in existence and high grade comics of this period are extremely hard to find. That is why we see new record prices for high grade golden age comics at each major auction. For example, All-American #16 recently sold for $60,000, Superman #1 for $170,000, Detective #1 brought $90,000, Sensation #1 went for $60,000, Captain America #1 sold for $77,000 and Marvel Comics #1 brought $41,000. All these sales tell the tale of a great leap forward in the prices of golden age comics, so we can again say "These are the best of times and the worst of times."

And then there was one. Yes, the only independent comic distributor left is Diamond Distribution. The other comic distributors — Capitol City, Friendly Franks, Hamps; Temdee, Flash City, C.I.B. Associates and Andromeda — are all gone. So now the wealth is divided by Diamond and Marvel's Heroes World. What will be next?

Special thanks to Carey Hall, the editor of Comics Values Monthly for his input. I must also mention Harry Rinker, Robert J. Sodaro, Buddy Scalera, Mike Grell, Mike Gold, Rich Spears and Allan Miller for guidance and talent in making this annual possible.

Last, but not least, to all the writers, artists, letterers, colorists, editors, and all at DC, Marvel, Dark Horse, Image, Malibu, Acclaim-Valiant, Entity Comics, Topps, Warp Graphics, Teckno Comics and Continuity... Hearty Thanks!

Greetings from Seattle! Allow me a few moments to come in from the rain and comment on the past year in this crazy business of comics.

"The sky is falling!" That was the sentiment extolled by many retailers in 1995 following the succession of Publisher/Distributor exclusivity contracts announced. Well, it is one year later and the sky is still there, albeit a little lower to the ground, but it is sill there! The past year has delivered neither the doom foretold by skeptics of or the glorious advantages promised by supporters of these exclusive deals. 1996 has seen a number of publishers announce that they will no longer be linked to a single distributor, and more are sure to follow.

Heroes World has made major improvements in the ability to handle customer service issues, with the customary 30 minutes "on hold" being done away with. Heroes World reorders are being filled in a much timelier manner.

Marvel & DC: The release of Marvel versus DC/DC versus Marvel (and the subsequent "Amalgam" titles) was a resounding success. The advanced hype for this "event" paid off in a big way as this series was in demand by both current and former comic book readers, most of whom had been debating the outcome of such a battle for years. Kudos to both Marvel and DC for seeing to it that each issue shipped on time and that reorders were readily available, factors which helped the new customer enjoy this series without frustration.

DC: DC Comics has continued to keep readers interested with it's diverse line of publications. Vertigo and Paradox Press continue to be the place to took for original, high-quality, comics, with Neil Gaiman and Chris Bacchalo's Death: The Time of Your Life mini-series leading the pack.

One of the most prestigious series in comics came to an end this year with the release of Sandman #75, but Preacher and The Dreaming seem destined to fill the void vacated by Morpheus.

The break-up of Clark Kent/Superman & Lois Lane garnered a fair share of press outside of the comic book industry, with coverage in both the television and print media, but this failed to bring many new customers into the shops.

With the release of Kingdom Come, DC Comics has almost guaranteed a top slot on everyone's "Top Ten of 1996" list. The success of KC goes to show that cover price is of little consequence if the comic is well written and drawn.

Helix, DC's new science-fiction imprint, should prove to be a winner.

Marvel: 1995 brought forth "Marvel-ution,", 1996 delivered an order of "Marvel-cution" as downsizing hit the "House of Ideas" with Marvel Entertainment Group "releasing" a number of key Editorial personnel, and cutting back on even more titles, including the consolidation of Marvel's 2099 titles into one comic. Malibu Comics has ceased to exist, with the remaining Malibu titles being published under the Marvel Comics banner.

Marvel's promise to bring quality creators to their core titles paid off. The change in creative teams on Captain America, Thor, and Daredevil has lead to a dramatic increase in both sales and fan support making these titles among the most respected Marvel titles around.

Marvels "Unfinished Business" with Jim Lee and Rob Liefeld has certainly, gotten the fan's attention. Marvel's turning over creative control on their cornerstone characters Captain America, Fantastic Four, Hulk, Iron Man, Avengers, Thor to the two Image upstarts goes to show that time heals all wounds.

The Marvel/Paramount publishing arrangement shows promise, with the license to Star Trek returning to Marvel just in time to celebrate Trek's 30th Anniversary.

Dark Horse: Dark Horse Comics continued to increase in popularity as they close out their first decade in the publishing field. Having built up a solid base of licensed titles, Dark Horse consistently releases one project of quality and diversity after another. This year has seen the release of Sin City: That Yellow Bastard, Nexus Meets Madman, Bettie Page Comics, Star Slammers, Hellboy (in various titles), Girl Trouble and what is sure to be one of the most important works of comic art in years, Joe Kubert's Fax From Sarajevo. This past year has strengthened Dark Horse's position in this industry and I am sure that they will do even better next year.

Image: 1996 has seen a definite change in Image, with a number of Image creators leaving the Image umbrella and go off on their own. Dale Keown has formed Full Bleed Studios in order to publish Pitt; Marc Silvestri dissolved his relationship between Image and his own Top Cow Studios; Jim Lee, while still remaining part of Image, has formed Homage Comics in order to publish "creator owned" comics. Who know what the future holds for Image Comics as we know it.

As much as last year was a year of change, this year has been a year of redistribution. Mistakes and a shrinking reader base has rocked the Big Three comic publishers. At the same time we have seen strong growth in the independent and alternative comics. This is a welcome sign of growing diversity in the readership pool.

Marvel: This has been a terrible year for Marvel Comics. The clone storyline in the Spider-Man books has proved to be a horrible mistake. Sales have dropped 50 to 60 percent for this once dominant character line. The 2099 books have stalled and the Malibu titles are done. Marvel has cancelled more titles this year than I can remember them ever doing before. But there are some bright spots. The X-titles have remained stable, thanks to Onslaught, the Marvel/DC crossover did very well, and Daredevil seems to be back.

Lastly to Unfinished Business, there is a lot of resistance to the return of Lee and Liefeld and the changes they bring. This may be another major Marvel mistake.

DC: DC has had the best year of the major companies. While they have lost some marketshare in the super-hero lines, Vertigo and Paradox have done fairly well. Kingdom Come has been a solid hit. The DC/Marvel crossover and the Batman Contagion story were also well received.

DC has also cancelled quite a few books this year. The end of Sandman was expected but still sad.

Bright spots for DC: Green Lantern/Green Arrow crossover,

Aquaman, Flash, and the new Matrix science fiction line.

Image: The worst of all years was had by Image. All their titles are off, even former leaders Spawn and Wildcats. New titles are constantly being ignored. The only two hits were Witchblade and Weapon Zero. The rest were disappointing.

Dark Horse: This was a steady year for Dark Horse. Nothing jumped out but all were respectable. Star Wars and Sin City lead the pack with Concrete and Hellboy following.

Valiant/Acclaim: not worth talking about

Bad Girls: Done, done, done. Shi, Avenglyne, Warrior Nun, Toeme, sales dropping like lead implants.

Others: This was a great year for other types of books. The new Crow sold as well as the X-men. Stray Bullets and Strangers in Paradise are selling better than most Marvel or DC books. Hilly Rose, Cavewoman, Legendlore sell steadily off the rack. The surprise of the year is the growth of Caliber comics. Inferno, Mister X, Searchers, are all good books from Caliber. Other books you can't go wrong with, manga, such as Ranma 1/2, Biobooster Armor Guyver, Dominion, Battle Angel Alita.

In all this was a rocky year but a year of hope. The market has bottomed out and the readers are coming back. But these readers expect more than just the same old thing and I for one think that is a good sign. As the old saying goes: evolve or die.

1996 has passed — doomsayers and all.

The industry didn't die — though it's still got a bad cough. Many stores are out of the business now, an indication that the Darwinian theory can apply to businesses. Several comic book companies are gone also, with a lot of "independent" publishers merging with healthier organizations. Diamond, Capital and Marvel have all shrunk down and passed on the costs of their operations to the retailers who survive. The only people making any money off this arrangement is UPS. I wonder who owns stock in transportation companies?

The best observation about the last year is that the customers continue to demonstrate that they will spend their money for good stories or good art and will really lay down the cash for good stories with good art combined. Unfortunately for retailers, there aren't too many of the latter types of books published.

Another observation is that, much as we would like to think otherwise, the bad girl craze is not dead. As each successive issue sporting a half dressed buxom female holding a projectile weapon the size of a small pony is published, the customers gobble them up like so much cotton candy.

All that aside, let's talk about the various companies and what kind of year they had:

Marvel: Axed a whole bunch of titles — a lot of them deserved to be axed, many others Marvel never seemed to commit a great deal of effort towards. Killing the 2099 universe seemed particularly strange, since its sales were the steadiest of the bunch. The Spider-clone fiasco will probably continue to haunt Marvel for the better part of 1997 as they try to fix all of the problems. Hopefully the readers they scared off will come back once the writers figure out some way of putting Peter Parker back into action. The X titles continue strong with great interest in Onslaught (which sounds so much better than "Dark Xavier") and the attendant crossovers. Bringing back Jim Lee and Rob Liefeld has created quite a buzz — but a lot of it is negative (the Liefeld art for Captain America is a prime example). My guess is that the first two or three issues of each of the titles will sell like gangbusters; the quality will then hit the skids and so will sales. But who knows! I, for one, would like to be surprised. On the whole, the outlook for Marvel is pretty interesting; things could get very hot or they could go straight down the tubes.

DC: Quietly axed a lot of titles too — they were a little more discriminating than Marvel as most of the newly dead deserved their fate. Of course, DC is promptly starting up a bunch of new titles to take the place of the old ones (New Titans, Justice League, et al). The core titles of the DC universe have held steady all year — nothing flashy or exceptional (Contagion being the rule that defines the exception) and their sales are pretty much in the same line — nothing flashy, just steady. Where DC has really done well has been in the mini series and Vertigo titles. Kingdom Come has long awaited (some of us had children between the initial announcement and the release of the first issue) and was well worth the wait. The annuals have been solid successes as Year One and Tales of the Dead Earth had consistency across all the various titles. Vertigo has put together a string of hits — Preacher, Dreaming, Terminal City, Flex Mentallo and more. The outlook for DC looks solid: their product line promises no smash hits but at the same time slow but steady wins the race every time.

Image: In their own unique style, Image cancelled a lot of titles, too. However, they've been using a different method than Marvel or DC — these titles have been cancelled before they were ever published! Every month Image solicits for titles that are mysteriously never released. Image must be using the old technique of soliciting books they don't intend to publish unless they reach certain levels of orders. Must be nice to have that exclusivity deal with Diamond.. For the books that are published, they all have their core readers. Extreme is by far the smallest group and never sells as well as any of the other titles. Wildstorm is definitely the strongest and even their crossovers are widely read (Wildstorm Rising and Fire From Heaven were both good sellers). But nobody has managed to put together another real "hot" book in the last year. There have been plenty of flash-in-the-pans and a couple of good individual books but nothing great. Two recent books might be bucking the trends — Witchblade and Dark Chylde. It's still too soon to be sure on these. As far as next year is concerned, I'm sure Image will present us with another rollercoaster ride up and down the popularity charts. Hopefully they will continue their close to on time policy and keep attracting more good writers and artists.

Dark Horse: Since Dark Horse doesn't have any ongoing titles, its hard to evaluate them as a group. Their aggressive acquisition of licensed properties has a lot of people reading their books but there isn't a lot of crossover between titles. Just because someone likes Tarzan doesn't mean they will read Grendel or Godzilla. Certainly the quality of writing and art are always high and the entertainment value of their books can't be beat. I just don't think they will get a bigger slice of the market until they find a way to introduce their own characters in ongoing titles. Certainly the upcoming year has a great deal of promise for more solid, quality books that will attract a lot of attention. Keep going guys!

Other Independents: Chaos keeps coming up with ways to keep the consumer interested in their products. The gold cover to the most recent Lady Death mini was a stroke of genius at a time when most people were getting bored with the character. The extra effort they put into marketing pays off time and again. Crusade had some trouble putting out product on time (again) and their sales have suffered because of it. Interest in their older issues has remained strong however and they seem committed to putting books out on time again. Valiant has cancelled most of their books and even though they promise to be back they will be hard pressed to recapture even a small percentage of the market that they used to have. I will admit that their propaganda reads will and I wish them success. Broadway has come up with some surprising books that have sold very well; good story and acceptable art equals sales. Their titles do not have a lot of exposure to the general public but their ad campaigns have been good so far. The upcoming year looks good. London Nights has stayed pretty steady although they seem uncertain which way to take their core characters. Until they get a little more direction I think it will be difficult for them to pick up more ground in the market. Big Entertainment seems to have shot the bolt; sales have been down for months with no sign of regaining lost ground. Even restarting the universe with new issue numbering did no good. Its too bad since there are a lot of good ideas and characters in their titles. Hopefully next year will show some improvement.

In conclusion, 1997 looks promising. There are still rocks in the water and the tides are strong, but a good sailor can navigate the waters using caution and teamwork.

FUNNYBOOK HEROES GO TO THE MOVIES!

It's Become Big Business to Translate Properties From Flat, Four-Color Heroes to the Silver Screen, and Everyone Wants in on it!

By Robert J. Sodaro

While it is true that the phenomenal success of comicbook-to-movie translations of characters like the Batman and The Mask have—once more—made it en vogue for Hollywoodland to mine comicbooks for source material, it is neither a new trend, nor a particularly sure-fire way to make money. Because, for every *Ninja Turtles that makes it big, there are a dozen Punishers, Captain Americas, et. nauseam that litter the landscape of barely watchable. Still, it has been blockbuster movies like the Batman trilogy and The Mask that have made Hollywood execs look more favorable at comicbooks as a development ground for intellectual properties.

In fact, it would be safe to say that in the past decade, more and more have comics been developed not so much for their own sake, but for their potential to be marketed in other arenas (movies, TV, toys, video/computer games, CD-ROMS, etc.) Further, one could argue that some companies were founded with that premise as the starting block—Broadway, Motown/Machineworks, and Tekno Comix all come to mind.

Jim Shooter (Broadway Comics), and Michael Davis (Motown/Machineworks) both virtually admitted that developing their properties into arenas other than comics was a primary motivation to founding these comicbook divisions of established multi-media entertainment companies. Not to mention Big Entertainment's Tekno Comix line that is all but poised to translate their comics into other media (Rumor has it that Leonard Nimoy's Primortals is slated for a line of prose novels, while other titles are bandied about as in development for movies or CD-ROMS.)

This past year Paramount "retrieved" all of its comicbook licenses (most notably the lucrative Star Trek franchise), to found it's own comicbook division (which then went into partnership with Marvel, under the watchful eye of Marvel editor Bobbie Chase). So far this line has produced adaptations of a few Paramount movies (Mission Impossible), and promises more (including an X-Men/Star Trek crossover, DS9, Voyager, and an Unlimited comic featuring both the original and Next Gen crews). Movie Schlockmeister Roger Corman (The Haunting of Morella), announced, then abandoned plans to found a comicbook line. Tom Mason and Chris Ulm from MainBrain Productions (formerly with the late, lamented Malibu Comics), have been tantalizing us for nearly a year with bits and pieces of their new "Pacific" line of comicbook titles. And these are only the ones we know about.

Movies based on Barb Wire comics and The Phantom were released in 1996.

Making the Connection

As can be expected, some comicbook companies are far better at translating their characters and concept to movies than are others, DC, due in part (one would suspect), to its relationship to Warner Bros. (both owned by Time Warner), has successfully translated Superman and Batman to movies (although, one could build a reasonably successful argument that such a straight-line connection to a production company isn't the be-all and end-all, by pointing to the 1960s Batman TV series). Still, it, arguably, does give the company an edge (one need only point to the numerous disappointing films, TV-movies, and TV series that have been made off Marvel's characters.)

Another company that has enjoyed a very successful relationship with movie land has been Dark Horse, which is surprising considering that it is an independent company, without major corporate funding. Still, over the years since it's inception, Dark Horse, more so than any other company, has enjoyed a very lucrative, symbiotic relationship with Hollywoodland. By way of pointing this out, one need only list the number of movies that Dark Horse has translated into successful comic series, Robocop, Aliens, Predator, James Bond, Terminator, and The Thing, not to mention Godzilla, Star Wars, and Indiana Jones (which originally appeared at Marvel, and were snapped up by Dark Horse when their licenses expired).

Like all major comicbook publishers, (and several minor), Dark Horse has also produced its share of movie-related adaptations (Evil Dead, The Abyss, Pumpkinhead). Still, it is Dark Horse's success with bringing original concepts to the screen (The Mask, Time Cop, Tank Girl, Barb Wire), that rates it high marks (to be sure while Time Cop, Tank Girl, and Barb Wire did no where as well as The Mask, but the fact that Dark Horse has produced four major motion pictures in the last decade, and Marvel—which easily has four times the amount of characters, and, presumably, more pull—has also produced four feature films, three of which headed straight to video (Captain America 1 & 2, The Punisher), and one that was yanked altogether and exists only in buried vault (The Fantastic Four), speaks volumes.

True, Marvel did have a run of TV shows and made-for-TV movies back in the '70s and '80s (Spider-Man, The Hulk, Dr. Strange, and others), but, for whatever the reason, none of these very popular characters ever made it to the silver screen. Sure, the Hulk's TV run was popular, but Spidey's show was quite another story. When talking about the Spidey TV show Stan Lee stated "That was one of the biggest mistakes we ever made. We were very flattered when someone wanted to do a TV series, and were happy to sign the contract. We weren't thinking at the time that a TV series could be done badly and do as much harm as good. Everybody tried their best, but unfortunately, the way the series was done it just didn't have the essence of the spirit of Spider-Man."

Even the X-tremely popular X-Men have never made it past the animated stage (this past year the next generation of X-Men actually did get a live-action made-for-TV movie (Generation X), and there is talk of a sequel, but if success is measured in "bigger is better" (and in Hollywood, it certainly is), then it can be pointed out that for all its success in print, Marvel has yet to "arrive", and will not until one of its characters hits the big screen (the left-handed nod to Nick Fury by Charlton Heston in James Cameron's True Lies, not withstanding).

According to Entertainment Weekly, plans for Cameron's big-budget Spider-Man movie are parked in terminal neutral while as many as five different production houses wage war Hollywood-style over the right to produce a movie version of the wall-crawling arachnid. There are also plans for a Christopher Columbus (Nine Months), Fantastic Four movie (this was cited as the reason for the shelving of the independent version FF that was completed and buried); but again—you are only as good as your last movie, and Marvel still doesn't have a "last" movie (at least not one to which it will admit).

The New Players

With his career now in triple-overtime, Shooter not only still doggedly refuses to give up the ghost, but is his ever–confident self as he assumes the titular head of a new comicbook company, Broadway Comics, the newly-established comicbook arm of Broadway Video. No newcomer to the entertainment industry, Broadway Video is a firmly established player that is headed up by Lorne Michaels and owns the rights to such diverse properties as Saturday Night Live, The Lone Ranger, Lassie, and The Kids in the Hall.

Slated to debut in November with its first title (The Powers that Be), Broadway will slowly increase its lint to four monthly (company-owned) plus a slate of creator-owned titles. On the company-owned side are The Powers that Be, Shadow State (Dec.), Fatale (Jan.), and Electropolis (Feb.) All of the titles are written (full-script), committee-like by Shooter, and his three executive editors, and co-writers Janet Jackson, Joseph A. James, and Pauline Weiss and are drawn by a group of talented newcomers and industry favorites. Each of the four titles will actually feature a pair of stories showcasing two different characters or groups (see sidebar). "Because we work for a movie company and we wanted to have a lot of variety that we would be much more diverse in terms of how characters come to be or where they come from; and we're taking great pains to make sure that they work together."

Children's movies were based on Richie Rich and Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles.

When talking to Michael Davis (Motown/Machineworks), you can tell that his excitement about his books and characters is a tangible thing, "The reason I did a line of books when I first came to Motown is because that it's just smart business. Intellectual properties in and of itself are a gold mine of not only monetary means, but in terms of educational means and political means." In all of this, he still remembers his roots. "Comics should be taken first for their entertainment value. I am never, ever going to get too serious with these books. Don't get me wrong, we will be doing things which are going to change the way people look at comics and make them think, but there will always be comics for comics sake, in these books."

Still, in the final analysis, the most important aspect of the industry is not just the fans, but the young fans. "When we talk to kids in schools it is not to push our product, Davis explained, "but it is to make them understand that there is an opportunity out there in the arts." The reason for all this, according to Davis, is to get across the message that there is more to comics than just the four-color splash, and a $2.25 ride. He pointed to the motion picture industry which not only has Oscars, but an organization that provides for its members in the form of retirement homes for elder actors. "There are a lot of comicbook artists who just aren't very smart when it comes to money; they live from check to check. We're trying to change that."

The Wave of the Future

Sure, comics, movies, and TV all have similar starting points, and thus are vaguely related cousins, but success in one of these diverse media isn't going to translate into success in another. Certainly, there have been one or two big hits, and several others that have been reasonably successful and have remained alive in the video and cable market (The Rocketeer, Judge Dredd and there's every indication that Barb Wire will also do all right here), but even though the misses far outweigh the hits, there is no sign of letup. Hollywood will not only continue to purchase and revamp comics for material (Stealth Force, a pre-Ultraverse Malibu comic is currently being produced as an Aaron Spelling TV–movie), but will continue to produce comicbook-like movies (Roger Corman's Black Scorpion, Robert Townsend's Meteor Man, Darkman, and Captain Zoom).

One can only hope that Hollywood will treat the source material with a modicum of respect. Unfortunately, respect for the source material isn't enough Pat Mills—one of the creators who help develop Judge Dredd for the English comicbook 2000 A.D.—felt that the Sylvester Stallone movie incarnation of the British anti-hero was dead on (save for some slight Americanizations), but the big-budget movie wound up stiffing in the theater.

The reason for this was simple enough; movie-goers attending the screenings who were unaware of the character's origins came away with feeling vaguely ripped off by a Robocop-lite knock-off. Truth to tell, Judge Dredd's only real crime was that it came to the screen 20 years too late, and that Robocop was actually lifted almost wholesale from Dredd.

Given both the lesson of Dredd, and how prose classics like The Scarlet Letter have been mangled over the years by Hollywood, there may be little hope for the movie careers of the four-color heroes of our youth. Still, with people like Rob Liefeld, Todd McFarlane, Jim Lee, and the other hard-headed Image head honchos, plus the growing crop of self-styled independent, self-published creators currently populating the comicbook landscape, the very real possibility does exist that some of these characters just might remain true to their original incarnations (Dave Stevens was able to maintain control over The Rocketeer, and Dark Horse publisher Michael Richards certainly shepherds his company's creations through the creative mill).

Forthcoming movies will be based on Mars Attacks and Spawn.

In the final analysis, all of this doesn't really matter, for Hollywood and comicbook companies will do as they wont, and—as they say—"Money talks and BS walks." As industry professionals from the late, great Jack "King" Kirby, to former DC editor Mike Gold have repeatedly stated, comicbooks are developed as cheap source material for movies, TV, and toys, and anyone who tells you different is lying.

On a personal level, this writer grew up in a time when there were few, if any, comicbook heroes who made it out the four-color ghetto. Having lived through both (no translations, and flawed, or downright ghod-awful ones), and is hard-pressed to state with any certainty which is worse; but—given the choice—would always opt for hiss heroes to make the leap. For it is always better for the connection to be made, for, in the final analysis, even if the translation sucks, there are always the comicbooks themselves, which is—if we were true to ourselves—is why we're here in the first place.

TELLING STORIES: AN INTERVIEW WITH MIKE GRELL

In spite of the fact that he has spent the better part of his 23 years in the comicbook industry on the leading edge of the creator's rights wave, Mike Grell is still perhaps best known for his work on Warlord and Green Arrow for DC. In fact, his ground-breaking work on Green Arrow : The Long Bow Hunters not only helped redefine, and revive the character, but (for better or worse), helped kick off a new wave of tomes that would re-interpret the origins of many Silver-Age Superheroes.

Always choosing to go his own way, Grell—when given the opportunity to pick (or create), his own characters, he tended to rugged, outdoorsmen-types (Warlord, Green Arrow, Jon Sable Freelance, Starslayer, Joshua Brand (Shaman's Tears), Bar Sinister). Which is not to say that he can't handle straight superhero types either (Superboy and the Legion of Superheroes, Flash, Green Lantern). Currently he is producing Maggie the Cat for Image, and is working on a number of projects for Image, DC, and (surprise!), Marvel working with characters that include Spawn, Batman, and Spider-Man.

Never at a loss for either work (or words), Mr. Grell kindly stole a few precious moments out of his very busy schedule—virtually on the eve of his wedding—to chat at length about his career, the state of the industry, and his up-coming projects.

CVA: For the sake of those comicbook readers who just tuned in, could you walk us briefly through your career?

Grell: I think I can do that...I am Zoltan the Magnificent, rightful king of the Gypsies. I was stolen at an early age by a family of Wisconsin woodcutters, and raised as one of their own kind, and forced to grow up in an area where we didn't have any television, we had radio and movies and books. So I learned to read and I learned to appreciate the visual medium when I could get it, and most often it was in the form of the Sunday funnies. So since I wasn't get the opportunity to get to wrestle a bear an prove my worthiness to be the true king of the Gypsies, I decided on another course of action. Also I managed to flunk all my math courses. Which sort of let out the idea of becoming the next Frank Lloyd Wright.

CVA: I always tell my wife that if I could balance my checkbook I would have been an accountant, not a writer.

MAGGIE THE CAT™

Grell: There you go. It's pretty much a similar situation here. I love to design buildings, but the thought of them falling down immediately...so in an effort to earn an honest living, I wanted to be a lumberjack just like my old man, and he wisely got me a job one Summer working in the woods, and I decided to give that up real fast, and find a way to earn a buck without having to use my back so much.

CVA: Makes sense to me.

Grell: Sure did to me too. Right immediately after my first week working in the woods. That was where I made that decision. Personally, I intend to retire shortly after my death. There are guys who continue afterwards, like L. Ron Hubbard. He's still writing books.

CVA: Robert Heinlein had three or four books come out after his death.

Grell: Yup, but in L. Ron Hubbard's case, he's actually writing them from beyond the grave and sending messages to...I don't know...there we go alienating an entire group of people. But, at any rate, I decided to become a commercial artist and long before I was able to get entrenched in that field. I got caught up in the draft. and spent four years as an illustrator working in the Air Force, where I met a guy who told me that I should really become a cartoonist because, cartoonist's only work two or three days a week and make a million bucks a year. By my calculation—after 23 years in the business—someone owes me about 22 and a half million dollars, and about 20 years off. My first published work as a cartoonist was as an assistant Dale Messik on Brenda Starr, and my first comicbook courtesy of Joe Orlando and Julie Schwartz who were willing to take a chance on me. I walked into Julie's office (at DC Comics), with my prepared encyclopedia salesman speech, "Good afternoon Mr. Schwartz, could I introduce you in this deluxe, 37 volume set, yada, yada, yada..." And he let me get as far as "Good afternoon Mr. Schwartz..." and he says, "What the Hell makes you think you can draw comics?" So I unzipped my portfolio and tossed it on his desk and said, "Take a look, and you tell me." He called Joe Orlando in to see what I had to show and I walked out about half an hour later with an Aquaman script in my hands.

CVA: We should all be that lucky, or that talented.

Grell: I had a lot of misfortune right at that moment because as I was walking in the door at one end of the building, Dave Cockrum was walking out on the other end having just quit Legion of Superheroes, and Murray Boltinoff got back from vacation to find himself without an artist. I was lucky enough to get tapped to do Superboy and the Legion of Superheroes. That was my first regular assignment. Then I created Warlord for DC, and moved on from there to Pacific Comics when they fired up a creator-owned line. I did Starslayer for Pacific, and went from that to doing the Turzan comic strip in the Sunday papers, more or less all at the same time, and continued on with the creator-owned aspect of comics by going to First Comics when they got fired up. I did Jon Sable Freelance there. Then through many and diverse round about means I eventually found my way back to DC and worked on Green Arrow: the Long Bow Hunters series, and wrote 80-odd episodes of that. Eighty-odd ones and about four regular ones. From that stage my connection with Todd McFarlane—having dated back to the time he was about 18 years old—really came through and paid off big-time. He asked me if I was interested in taking part in his new company that he was getting started up, called Image Comics. I said, "Yeah, when you guys get started up, give me a call." About a year later he said, "Hey bud, you want in, you're in." I wrote Shaman's Tears for 13 episodes, and switched over to Maggie the Cat. Thereby hangs the tale. I've got another new project on the line here that you might also be interested in which is, Todd and I are finally, actually working together. I'm producing a book for him. It's going to be the very first fully-painted Spawn book. I'm writing it and doing the layouts, and Rob Prior is a very, very talented artist who's done a lot of work for companies like LucasFilms, and Lightspawn Productions, posters for the X-Files and any number of commercial jobs. Rob and I have been collaborating together on coloring various assignments for quite a while and we decided that this would be a great time for us to work together with Rob showing the entire comicbook world exactly what he can really do when he cuts loose. So Rob is going to paint it from my layouts. It's going to be a three-issue series running a total of 96 pages. I've already done the covers and have just started on the layouts.

CVA: What has propelled you to go with the cutting edge of creator-ownership? It seems to me that you could have had a very profitable career by doing what everybody else did—working at corporate publishers, on company-owned characters—and continued being well-known for doing the types of books you became well-known for at DC in the first place.

Grell: I had any number of offers and opportunities and opportunities to work on some of the biggest titles around. Occasionally I've taken the opportunity. Early on I did a short stint on Batman, which I brutalized, and I am in the process of making up for that. Right now I have a Batman project that I'm writing and illustrating, all on my own—at least writing, penciling, and inking. I think that this is sort of going to compensate on the tragic job I did back in '75. The fact is that I've always felt drawn to a certain type of character, a certain type of storytelling, a certain type of action, and anytime you start dealing with company-owned projects, you're limited to the company's needs the publisher's needs, and a lot of them are predicated on maintaining a certain status quo for the character. In other words, if a character has been successful for 25 or 30 years—in some cases it's 50 years—at the time I was breaking away and going into the independents, the publishers didn't necessarily want to hear any new ideas. They wanted to stick with what was safe and what was sold. The other aspect of it, from the economics, of things, very much in the vein of one of my heroes, Milton Caniff, If you create something. Let's say you're an employee with IBM, you invent a new computer, and they make 500-billion on your new computer, at the end of your 20 years you get a gold watch and a pat on the back. And that really still does happen sometimes in comics. Things have gotten a little bit better, largely due to the efforts to people who've been bold enough to take a stand maybe take a chance trying to break out. But you have to remember, in the time of the careers of the creator-owned effort were taking these chances, neither DC or Marvel was paying any royalties. You got a page rate and that was it. Any other exploitation was purely for the benefit of the publisher, and nothing for the creator.

CVA: With the full-scale make-overs over the past several years of numerous major characters it finally seems as if the big companies are finally getting the hint that it's not necessary to always keep the status quo. You can mix things up a bit, as it were.

Grell: Now its become trendy to salvage sales by trashing the old, established characters by redoing them. It's not always a positive thing. It can be, if it's done with done with a certain respect and caring, for the traditions of the character and not loosing sight for what made it great in the first place. For instance, I don't think you'd have much success with a Batman who was a teenage kid as so many of the characters tend to be now. you couldn't make him a Black teenager, for instance, and still have him be Batman. people just wouldn't buy it. Superman still has to come from Krypton, the planet still has to explode, he still has to be an adopted son of Earth in order for it to make any sense, in order to carry on its tradition, otherwise the readers are going to feel cheated.

CVA: These days, it often feels like the changes are done solely with an eye towards marketing. You know, "Well, if we change the costume, we can get a whole new line of toys out."

Grell: Well, that's one aspect of it. With the change-ups in comicbook sales these days it is very difficult to fault a publisher who says, "let's change the costume so we can get a new line of toys, so that we can generate more income from this character." Because, you've got to remember, by the sales figures that we have showing up on the books today, there are very few books that are actually in the black from the publishing end.

CVA: I had always heard the story—which very well may be an Urban Legend—that sometime during the '60s somebody at DC decided that the comics weren't making much money, but the movies, TV shows, toys and such based on them were making money. So why not cancel the comics and just produce the licensed products. However it was then pointed out that if it wasn't for the comics themselves, there would be no characters to license. Therefore even though the comics didn't produce much revenues, it was necessary to keep them going for all the ancillary rights.

Grell: This was said to me by a senior executive at DC comics about six or seven years ago, and this is a pretty accurate quote: "DC is not in the business of publishing comics. We are in the business of producing material for exploitation."

CVA: That's a pretty harsh stance.

Grell: It's a harsh stance, but a realistic one. A single Batman movie will generate more money for DC Comics in a year than the entire comicbook publishing line. That was a hard stance for me to hear, and a little alarming for me to listen to, but the reality of it has proven out to me, and the wisdom of it has proven out as well.

CVA: You've never done any work for Marvel. Why is that?

Grell: In point of fact, I have not done any publish work for Marvel, other than a few of their pin-up characters for their Marvel Universe book, and the contribution of a few pages to the Heroes for Hope book. In point of fact this is something...I don't know if it's been pointed out...but I never miss the opportunity if I can...the true credit for that entire book, the Heroes for Hope has got to go to Chris Claremont. Because what I received to work from was essentially a completed story and all I did was take what Chris had written add a few "Grellisms" to it and retype it and send it back. He crafted that entire thing and guided it from start to finish. I think that all the credit is due to him. It was a horrendous job to co-ordinate all that, and I think he did it magnificent fashion. And that's the end of my Chris Claremont Fan Club Pitch. But, beyond that, I do have a Spider-Man project that's in development right now.

CVA: So there's been no particular reason why you haven't ever done anything for Marvel in the past?

Grell: There were a couple of times where the opportunity arose but the timing was wrong for me. There was story for one of the Marvel books with some of the Avenger characters that I was contemplating working on, but with my scheduling at the time I just could not work it in, and I had to turn it back. But no, there never has been a particular reason. It has not been a stand against Marvel in any way.

CVA: Is there any established character that you've grew up enjoying or have enjoyed who's exploits you'd like to do?

Grell: You're right. There is a character that I'd love to get my hands on, it'll probably never happen—particularly with what's going on right now—but that character is Captain America. I've loved the character ever since I was a kid. My dad was a...I didn't discover this until much later...but my dad was a Jack Kirby fan. I never really knew where these comics came from. I discovered later on that they were his. The books that we had around the house a lot when I was a kid were Captain America, Sub Mariner, and The Human Torch and Toro. Those are still among my favorite characters. There are a couple of others that I wouldn't mind taking on in a certain fashion. I'm finally getting my chance on Batman to demonstrate to the world that I actually can draw it, and I'm having a lot of fun with this project. Beyond that I honestly think that in the comicbook field, the ultimate would be Captain America as far as I'm concerned, or, perchance—if I ever got to be a good enough artist—Superman. And I say that with great respect for Curt Swan. I never realized what a magnificent artist this guy was, until I saw some of his penciled pages one day. The differences between the characters are so subtle, so delicate that it's very difficult for even the best inker to match up with that kind of stuff. Curt had a knack for drawing a herd of people standing around a watercooler that actually looked like people standing around a watercooler; and Lois Lane was just so darn cute, you wanted to eat her up. I had never realized that before. It's a pretty daunting thing to even contemplate following a guy like Curt on a book, but, there' you go, everybody's got to have a goal of some sort. With respect to my other big love, which is comic strips. That was the field that I actually wanted to get into. One day I would like to be independently wealthy enough to take on Prince Valiant. I say that with a certain amount of dismay in the fact that comic strips pay so badly these days. I had my run on the Tarzan comic strip from '81 to '83 and I was being paid exactly what Burne Hogarth was being paid in 1953. There's not a lot of money to be made in action/adventure strips anymore.

CVA: Everything is a gag-a-day. And looking at some of the stuff that is being produced, it looks like I could draw it.

Grell: Oh, sure, there's a very simple reason for that, and I didn't understand it. So I talked to a fellow who's president of one of the big syndicates, and he said, "Look, this is a salesman's job. If you take a gag strip out on the road, you can probably one in four editors on picking up that gag strip. In order to sell an action/adventure strip, you have to get up on the editor's desk and do a tap dance." And he's right.

CVA: Yeah, the attention span of having to follow a strip every day is an issue. With the gag-a-day strip, even when they follow themes, you don't have to read every one of them to get what's going on.

Grell: The reality is more the perception of what the public wants, then the actual desires of the public. What the editors want is, a copy of whatever is the hottest strip out there. If you came up with a new Calvin and Hobbes you can bet you'd sell that strip.

CVA: I can see that. In my local paper, the cartoon that replaced The Far Side looks just like The Far Side. It's the same kind of drawing style and the same kind of off-beat, macabre humor. How many Doonsbury clones are there out there? Other than comicbooks or comic strips. Do you have any goals or aspirations? Are you looking to translate out in to other media?

Grell: Oh sure, I've always been passing through on my way to something else. It's an interesting fact that most of the old-timers that I've spoken to—writers and artists as well—always seem to have something else that they've wanted to do. It wasn't until later on that I realized that's mostly a reflection of growth.

JON SABLE™ and MAGGIE THE CAT™

You have to maintain a certain growth pattern otherwise you stagnate. If you stagnate, the sound that you hear is the footsteps of some young lion who's about to run up your backside, and you'll get trampled in the dirt. My style and my interests have changed quite considerably over the years. I find two fields that have a very strong interest for me. One is wildlife painting and illustrations, and the other is writing. I think I've become a much better writer in the past five or six years than I ever have been before. I'm pursuing that. I have a screenplay that is, right now, being looked at by a major producer. I've had some success with selling at least options in Hollywood. An option is—for anybody who doesn't realize—is in the category of wishful thinking. But at least it shows I'm on the right track, that people are interested in the stories that I want to tell.

CVA: I recall that, a while back, you had someone option the Jon Sable character.

Grell: Paramount was interested in optioning it for Eddie Murphy.

CVA: What ever happened to that?

Grell: It was picked up as a TV series for ABC that ran six episodes before it was canceled. Actually, it ran two episodes before it was canceled, but six before it was off the air. That was in '87.

CVA: Who was Jon Sable?

Grell: Lewis Van Bergen. Lou actually probably had a more active career before the series, I'm sorry to say, because of all the actors who were involved in that series he's probably the only one who didn't immediately get snapped up for something much bigger and much greater when the series was canceled. Rene Russo played Eden Kendall. Holly Fulger played Myke Blackmond, she was immediately cast in Matt Furror's series Dr. Doctor. Ken Page, of course a Broadway standard, had a role as a sidekick character. I don't think Ken's ever been out of work. My theater-going friends and folks I know who work in theater, were just astounded to find out that this guy involved in that production. He played Old Duteronomy in the original production of Cats. He has a magnificent singing voice. the last time I saw Lewis Van Bergen was in the movie Bugsie. He was getting the snot kicked out of him by Warren Beatty. He's a good actor. Quite an interesting character in and of his own right.

CVA: So are you trying to option you other characters?

Grell: Everybody's trying to option their characters.

CVA: Doesn't it get easier to sell something after you've sold something?

Grell: Oh, absolutely. On the basis of the Sable TV series, I got a meeting with the executive vice-president of programming at CBS. I didn't know exactly what I was going to say to this guy, but winged it on the spot. We had a nice chat and he said he was interested in whatever else I might have, and things along those lines. Sort of striking while the iron is hot. The trick is to not just sell something, but get it produced. Like I said, Options are wishful thinking, and of the features that are optioned, particularly for television, the actual rate of production is maybe one in a thousand that will ever get on the air.

CVA: Any observations you'd like to make about the comicbook industry?

Grell: Sure. This is the most bizarre period that I have ever seen. We've had our ups, and we've had our downs, but I've never seen it so far down for so far long. My traditional observation towards comics is that comics is always a wonderful medium to be working in because no matter happened with the rest of the world. we were always pretty much safe and secure. We weathered every kind of economic storm that the rest of the country experienced and always came through with flying colors. For the first time, I believe in the history of comics now, everyone is scratching to earn a living. It's never been that case before. It's a bit alarming.

CVA: Could this, then be the death-knell of comics, or do you think we'll survive this as well?

Grell: Oh, we'll survive it. The comics medium will never die. It may change, It may go through a new metamorphoses and come out the other end as something slightly different than what it is, but there'll always be the call for that bright-colored package that you can fold up and stick in your back pocket, and ride around on your bicycle...oh, wait a minute...I'm dating myself. No, I still do that though.

CVA: These days it seems that I'm always talking to people who are saying that comics will evolve into an on-line or computerized presence. Do you foresee something like that really happening?

Grell: I believe that that's a distinct possibility, and, in fact, a probability. I don't see any reason why shouldn't be done, and I'm not exactly sure why it isn't being done at this moment. It's a great idea, and certainly a niche market that would have a certain amount of life to it. But again, I don't think that it will replace a good, old-fashioned, four-color comicbook that you can take in the bathroom with you, but it's another step in the evolutionary process. When we went to glossy paper, and full-color reproduction, computer color, and so on that was all part of the continuing evolution and revolution. Change is what keeps you alive. It's what keeps life interesting. Sometimes the experience can be a bit negative, but it's all part of that growth thing. You come out on the other end better and stronger than you were before.

CVA: Do you think that more creators will move away from company-owned characters to creator-owned and self-published comics?

Grell: It's possible, but the warning that you have to bear in mind is that the thing that makes a lot of the comicbooks fly is not the publishing end. Just like the DC exec told me so many years ago, they're in the business of developing material for exploitation. If you have a lineup of books that are selling in marginal numbers and one or two really strong-selling titles can carry the weight. It's easier to keep a company in the black if you have large margins. One of the big mistakes that young publishers frequently make is they'll start out with the idea that they'll do four books. Well four books is fine for beginning, but you have to have someplace to go when one of those books fails, otherwise you've lost one-fourth of your line. If your line-up in general is only earning marginal and you don't have any real big strong sellers, then you had better have something to back it up. Otherwise you're out of business. That's the really simple way that works.

JOSHUA BRAND™ (SHAMAN'S TEARS™)

CVA: Marvel Comics has gone years without any type of movie or tie-in, and still had books that were big sellers.

Grell: Yes, but they've always had toys out, or something like that. But again, you're talking about the X-Men that were generating a massive amount of revenue worldwide, and that makes it possible to publish a book like Dazzler. Let's say the X-Men earns you a million dollars, and Dazzler looses you a half a million dollars. You're still half a million dollars in the good. You're still in the black at the end of the year. With a large publisher it's easier to do that. With respect to independent and small publishers, you get into the questions of how much money are you making? How good is this going to be for you? What are you going to get out of it? And is it worth your while? Well, for a lot of people, it is worthwhile. For the large dollars, or the line back-up security isn't as important as it is to have, number on, the creative freedom, and, number two, the pleasure of what it is that you're going to work on, and being able to see at least the potential—and that's a really important point—the potential for reward for your efforts.

CVA: So you think that the outrageous success of something like the Ninja Turtles is the exception rather than the rule of self-published comics?

Grell: Well Ninja Turtles is pretty exceptional. You have to remember how that started out. It was a fluke. It was a spoof. But it caught on and took off like crazy. I'd love to say that those are the rules that you point to, but until you can point to a higher percentage of successes it's still a crapshoot. The best thing you can do, I think, is have a job where you're doing what you love to do, earning enough money to live on, and you're happy doing it. Hollywood is great, but geese guys, don't quit your day job. I certainly hope that Hollywood kicks in my door in 20 minutes with the standard Rich and Famous contract in hand, but in the meantime, I'm not loosing track or sight of what it is I do for a living, and that is, I do comicbooks, and that's where I'm gonna be. Even if somebody dropped a ton of cash on me and said, "Here, go do what you want to do." Comics would always play a part in it, because it's a medium that I love. Storytelling. Somebody asked me if I consider myself to be more a writer or more an artist. My response was: I'm a storyteller.

DON'T FORGET TO LOOK FOR THE ONES WITH THE CARDS!

by Stuart Wells III

During the 1990s, a lot of comic books came polybagged with promotional trading cards. You probably have a number of these cards yourself, if you didn't foolishly throw them away. Have you ever wondered which ones you missed and how to sort them into sets? Well we did too, and so we will try to sort them out for you.

Basically, these cards fall into three different categories: Individual promotions, small sets (usually movie related), or comic book cross-over sets.

In the first group are all of the cards which are promotions for trading card series or individual promotions for the comic books. These are interesting, but mostly to promo card collectors (a substantial and growing segment of the trading card market). Most of them are worth about $1.00 each. Pogs and other items were used as similar promotions.

The second group of small movie related sets were mostly produced by Topps. Since Topps was a trading card company which was breaking into the comic book market, it issued several small sets of cards to promote its early comic issues, such as the comic book adaptations of the recent Bram Stoker's Dracula, Mary Shelly's Frankenstein and Jurassic Park movies. These are fairly easy to collect because the comics aren't all that hard to find and can generally be found together in the back issue boxes at your local comic shop. (Or, sadly, at your former comic shops' going-out-of-business sale.) These cards generally came two or three per comic and they are worth about $0.50 each.

Batman Versus Predator 4-card sheet

However, there are several substantial sets of comic book trading cards which appeared in multi-title crossover promotions or in several issues of a particular comic. These are not related to any normal trading cards and thus they are little known among trading card collectors, but they are potentially important because they are much harder to collect than cards that come in packs and therefore only a small number of sets will be collected.

Many sets in the early 1990s came as strips of one, two or three cards with a tab which made it possible for the cards to be stapled into the comic. If you collect these strips, don't cut the cards out. They will be more valuable in original condition. Later cards came polybagged with the comics, but some were bound in or available through mail-in certificates.

While you are filling in your back issue comics at the current bargain prices, you might want to look for the following comics, with their card sets. Only sets of 12 or more are covered in this article. Please note that all of the cards are the standard 3½" by 2½" in size, but our illustrations make the comics appear to be the same size, which they aren't.

BATMAN VERSUS PREDATOR. This 1991 co-publication by DC and Dark Horse has a 16 card set which came in two 4-card sheets per comic perfect-bound into BATMAN VERSUS PREDATOR: #1 & #3. Each of the card backs features two sentences about a different comic book artist. Both Batman and Predator have fans, and so these comics are collectible in their own right. Removing the cards from the comic will yield a practically worthless comic, but a nice set of cards. At least you only have to buy two comics to complete the set.

DARK HORSE COMICS. Dark Horse produced a 24 card set which came in 24 different comics in early 1991. The cards came on 2-card strips, stapled into the comics, so obviously the same strip appeared in at least two different comics. Each comic states "Dark Horse Trading Cards Inside!" The cards came in:

CHEVAL NOIR: #16, #17, #18 & #19
DARK HORSE PRESENTS: #48, #49 & #50
FLAMING CARROT: #25
INDIANA JONES AND THE FATE OF ATLANTIS: #1 & #2
OUTLANDERS: #25, #26, #27, #28 & #29
PREDATOR: BIG GAME: #2 & #3
PREDATOR 2: #1
ROACHMILL: #10
STARSTRUCK: THE EXPANDING UNIVERSE: #4
TANK GIRL: #1
VENUS WARS: #1, #2 & #3

Predator Big Game #2

Megalith: Deathwatch 2000 #1

DEATHWATCH 2000: PRELUDE

The first 13 of these cards came in issues #1 through #3 of Armor; Hybrids; Megalith; Ms. Mystic; Earth 4; and Cyber-Rad comics from Continuity, which appeared beginning in April 1993 and continued over that summer. The comics contained a cross-over series called "Deathwatch 2000: Prelude." The first 11 cards were randomly distributed and hidden inside the cover of the comic, so it is hard to complete a set just by buying the comics. Cards numbered 12 and 13 are scarce, as these are foil chase cards from these same comics. The rest of the cards appeared in later issues of these comics, but in those books you can see which card you are getting.

HEAVY HITTERS. "Heavy Hitters" was a group of comics published as Marvel Epics to distinguish them from the standard Marvel superhero titles. In 1993 they were promoted with a set of 23 strip cards which were stapled into the center of each comic. The cards have a designated autograph area and the other end of the strip is slightly wider and contains contest information.

IMPACT. From March to May 1992, each DC Impact comic came with a bound in card on a strip. The card backs have a puzzle image and the 18 images form two different 3x3 puzzles. Impact comics feature golden and silver-age heroes, not the usual DC superheroes. They did not prove to be popular and the comic series were discontinued by 1993. Collecting this series should not strain your pocket book.

MAGNUS ROBOT FIGHTER. These cards were a promotion for the Magnus Robot Fighter comic book series from Valiant in 1991. The card stock is slightly thinner than standard. The card fronts are full color, with a thin white border and the backs are white with text in black and a small drawing plus the card number. A set of the eight coupons could be redeemed for a copy of Magnus Robot Fighter #0 comic book plus the Magnus Robot Fighter trading card #0 by Barry Windsor-Smith. The 24 cards in the set are numbered #2 through #25. The coupons came in MAGNUS ROBOT FIGHTER #1 through #8.

MR. T AND THE T FORCE. Now Comics used a series of trading cards to help promote its Mr. T and the T Force comics starting in 1993. It didn't help, because the comic only lasted into 1994. Four promo cards were also produced and given away at trade shows and comics shows. The first seven issues each came with one of two cards. The newsstand version was a photo card of the bejeweled hero, while the direct market version was a comics style drawing. The last three issues had the same card in each version. Thus the total for the series was 17 cards in addition to the four promos. Neither the cards nor the comics are "heavily collected" so look for them in the bargain bin.
MR.T AND THE T FORCE: #1 thru #10

MIRAGE/NEXT CHARACTERS. These 24 cards present characters from three Mirage/Next comics series: Xenotech by Michael Dooney, Bioneers, by A. C. Farley and Stupid Heroes, by Peter Laird. The card fronts have a picture in a brown marbled frame and the backs have text in white on a black and grey surface. Pairs of the cards were stapled into the first three issues each of Xenotech; Bioneers; and Stupid Heroes comic books, Cards 19 and 20 were in Stupid Heroes Haelstrom comic and the others were in other comics which we would reveal if we knew. The cards were also handed out at trade shows in 1993, enclosed in a brown paper band that said "Secret."

RALPH SNART ADVENTURES.

The cards were bagged with various Ralph Snart Adventures comics by Now Comics in 1993. They have a white border and say "Ralph Snart Adventures" in a strip down the right side. The backs contain the card number, text and say "5th Anniversary Superset" on a white background. Some of the cards are only in the newsstand version of the comics, but this edition was available to the direct comic shop market; however, the reverse was not true. All of the 28 cards in the series (except the first four) are reproductions of Ralph Snart Adventures comic book covers. Most comics

ROBOTECH. These 26 cards came on two-card strips in Robotech Genesis: The Legend of Zor #1 thru #6, published by Eternity in 1992. Robotech Genesis: The Legend of Zor Special #1 has cards #1 & #2 while the regular edition and comics #2 thru #6 have one of two different two-card strips. There is also a promo strip #1 & #2. The card strips are not horizontal, like most others, but vertical, which makes for a very large strip. The other end of the strip includes promotional material for the comic book series

SWEET LUCY: TECHNOPHELIA.

These cards are from Interzone #1, Sweet Lucy #1, Interzone #2 and Technophilia #1, all published by Brainstorm Comics in 1993. Half have a red border with a red and white back and half have a blue border with a black and white back. There are 20 cards in the series, and they were available in a set at trade shows with a header slip and four duplicate cards.

TOPPS COMICS

In 1993 Topps Comics promoted many of its movie adaptations and other comic book series by polybagging trading card sets with the comics. Generally these are sets of 9 to 16 cards and some of them cross-promote Topps trading card sets for the same movie. The cross-promotion caused some confusion in the Jurassic Park series as the cards that come with the comic books are not numbered consistently and its hard to tell the comic book card series from the trading card series promos.

[BRAM STOKER'S] DRACULA:

TEENAGENTS: These cards came poly-bagged with TeenAgents comics. Leftover cards 1, 2 and 3 were also bagged in issue #4. That issue also contained a Zorro #0 promo comic book which may be a leftover from Jurassic Park: Raptor comic #1. Too bad Topps didn't have leftover Mickey Mantle rookie cards to include as well, but I suppose we are lucky they didn't include leftover sticks of bubble gum. There is also a card #0 (Aurik) from Secret City Saga #4.

MAKING THE GRADE

When comic collecting established itself as a source of income for savvy investors, it became clear that it was necessary to institute guidelines. Among these guidelines was the practice of grading comics fairly and evenly. Comic book values are established by a number of criteria, including scarcity, condition, and popularity. Grading is necessary in determining the true value of a particular issue.

For the purpose of brevity (and sanity), we shall explore the eight standard comic grades: mint, near mint, very fine, fine, very good, good, fair, and poor. Clearly, these eight grades could be split into even finer categories when haggling over an exceptionally rare or coveted Golden Age comic. In most cases, however, comic books can be evaluated using the eight standard grades.

New comic book collectors benefit most from learning how to assess the prospective value of a comic. These collectors protect themselves from being fleeced by unscrupulous dealers or hucksters. Yet, a majority of dealers, especially store owners, can be considered reliable judges of comic grade. Because comic retail may be their primary source of income, certain dealers are particularly adept at noticing comic book imperfections, especially in issues they intend to purchase. As such, hobbyists and collectors must understand that dealers need to make a minimum profit on their investments. Buying collectible comics entails certain risks. Therefore, dealers must scrutinize a comic to determine if the particular book will stand a chance of resale. Well-preserved comics are invariably more desirable to dealers because they are more desirable to collectors.

Despite the pop subcultural craze of comic book collecting, very old, well-preserved comics remain coveted collector's items. There are basically two reasons for this. The primary reason is that, in most cases, many people did not save their comic books for future generations. They read them and discarded them. Comic books were considered harmless ephemera for children. When these children outgrew their comics, their parents often threw them away. If everybody kept all of their comics, comics would not be valuable because everybody would have them scattered about the house!

The second reason that comics are collectible is because of their condition. This is a basic tenet of all collectibles. A car is more valuable with its original paint. A baseball card is more valuable if it has not been marred by bicycle spokes. Coke bottles, stamps, coins, and toys in good condition are all more valuable than their abused counterparts. Comic books are no exception.

It is a sad but basic fact of life that nothing lasts forever. Not metal nor rubber nor uranium! Everything has a shelf life, so to speak, and paper is no exception. The fact that paper comes from trees makes its life especially short by comparison. Paper is sensitive to light, heat, moisture, draught, pressure, impact, and just about every force of nature or man. Although paper has been a longtime tool of man, it is still downright delicate.

In spite of its shortcomings, paper has always been one of man's favorite inventions. Paper is cheap and plentiful, which are two cornerstones of effective capitalism. It is also a nearly perfect medium for written or drawn mass communications, which is why it is used for comic books. As mentioned, comic books were not designed to be preserved for fifty or more years. Rather, they were intended as unpretentious entertainment. As such, comic books were printed on rather cheap paper, usually the stock used for newspapers. Only the covers were privy to special glossy paper stocks.

Mint

Finding old comics in mint condition is rare or almost impossible. Mint condition comics usually fetch prices higher than price guide listings. Mint comics can sell for 120% or more of Comics Values Annual listed prices. The reason for this is the strict criteria reserved for mint comics.

Mint comics are perfect comics and allow no room for imperfections. Pages and covers must be free of discoloration, wear, and wrinkles. A mint comic is one that looks like it just rolled off the press. Staples and spine must meet perfectly without cover "rollover." The cover must be crisp, bright, and trimmed perfectly. The staples must not be rusted and the cover should not have any visible creases.

The interior pages of a mint comic are equally crisp and new. A mint comic must not show any signs of age or decay. Because of the paper stock used on many older comics, acid and oxygen cause interior pages to yellow and flake. It is much harder to find pre-1970 mint comics because of inferior storage techniques and materials. In the early days of collecting, few people anticipated that the very boxes and bags in which they stored their comics were contributing to decay. Acid from bags, backing boards, and boxes ate away at many comics.

Near Mint

A near mint comic and a mint comic are close siblings, with their differences slight, even to an experienced eye. Most of the new comics on the shelf of the local comic shop are in near mint condition. These are comics that have been handled gingerly to preserve the original luster of the book.

Near mint comics are bright, clean copies with no major or minor defects. Slight stress lines near the staples and perhaps a very minor printing defect are permissible. Corners must still be sharp and devoid of creases. Interior pages of newsprint stock should show almost no discernible yellowing. Near mint comics usually trade for 100% of the suggested Comics Values Annual listed prices.

Very Fine

A very fine comic is one that is routinely found on the shelves and back issue bins of most good direct market comic shops. This grade comic has few defects, none of them major. Stress around the staples of a very fine comic are visible but not yet radical enough to create wrinkles. Both the cover and interior pages should still be crisp and sharp, devoid of flaking and creases. Interior pages may be slightly yellowed from age.

Most high-quality older comics graded as very fine can obtain 80-90% of Comics

Values Annual listed prices. Newer comics graded as very fine get about 70-85% because many near mint copies probably exist. Despite that, very fine comics are desirable for most collectors.

Fine

Fine comics are often issues that may have been stored carefully under a bed or on a shelf by a meticulous collector. This grade of comic is also very desirable because it shows little wear and retains much of its original sharpness. The cover may be slightly off center from rollover. The cover retains less of its original gloss and may even possess a chip or wrinkle. The comers should be sharp but may also have a slight crease. Yellowing begins to creep into the interior pages of a comic graded as fine.

Fine comics are respectable additions to collections and sell for about 40-60% of the listed prices.

Very Good

A very good comic may have been an issue passed around or read frequently. This grade is the common condition of older books. Its cover will probably have lost some luster and may have two or three creases around the staples or edges. The corners of the book may begin to show the beginnings of minor rounding and chipping, but it is by no means a damaged or defaced comic. Comics in very good condition sell for about 30-40% of Comics Values Annual listed prices.

Good

A good comic is one that has been well read and is beginning to show its age. Although both front and back covers are still attached, a good grade comic may have a number of serious wrinkles and chips. The corners and edges of this grade comic may show clear signs of rounding and flaking. There should be no major tears in a good comic nor should any pages be clipped out or missing. Interior pages may be fairly yellowed and brittle. Good comics sell for about 15-25% of the Comics Values Annual listed prices.

Fair

A fair comic is one that has definitely seen better days and has considerably limited resale value for most collectors. This comic may be soiled and damaged on the cover and interior. Fair comics should be completely intact and may only be useful as a comic to lend to friends. Fair comics sell for about 10-20% of the Comics Values Annual listed prices.

Poor

Comics in poor condition are generally unsuitable for collecting or reading because they range from damaged to unrecognizable. Poor comics may have been water damaged, attacked by a small child, or worse, perhaps, gnawed on by the family pet! Interior and exterior pages may be cut apart or missing entirely. A poor comic sells for about 5-15% of the Comics Values Annual listed price.

Sniffing Out Grades

Despite everything that is mentioned about comic grading, the process remains relative to the situation. A comic that seems to be in very good condition may actually be a restored copy. A restored copy is generally considered to be in between the grade it was previous to restoration and the grade it has become. Many collectors avoid restored comics entirely.

Each collector builds his collection around what he believes is important. Some want every issue of a particular series or company. Others want every issue of a favorite artist or writer. Because of this, many collectors will purchase lower-grade comics to fill out a series or to try out a new series. Mint and near mint comics are usually much more desirable to hard-core collectors. Hobbyists and readers may find the effort and cost of collecting only high-grade comics financially prohibitive.

Getting artists or writers to autograph comics has also become a source of major dispute. Some collectors enjoy signed comics and others consider those very comics defaced! The current trends indicate that most collectors do enjoy signed comics. A signature does not usually change the grade of the comic.

As mentioned, comic grading is a subjective process that must be agreed upon by the buyer and seller. Buyers will often be quick to note minor defects in order to negotiate a better price. Sellers are sometimes selectively blind to their comic's defects. Comics Values Annual: 1997 provides this grading guide as a protection for both parties.

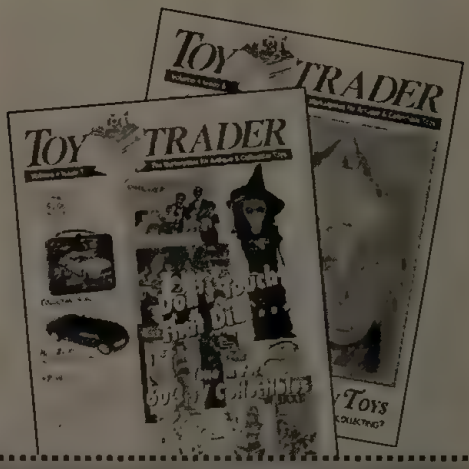
Don't Miss Your Chance to Win $100 Worth of Toys Each Month!



The hottest collectible today is toys, and whether you are an experienced collector or just beginning, Toy Trader will help you get more out of this exciting hobby.

Toy Trader combines useful articles, dealer interviews, collecting tips, pricing updates, along with thousands of toy ads each month. There is not a more complete toy publication available.

Each Issue Includes:

- Monthly Columns by Toy Experts
- Show & Auction Calendar
- Thousands of Toy Ads
- Pricing Updates
- Feature Articles
- Dealer Interviews
- Collecting Tips
- Market Trends

HOW TO WIN $100 WORTH OF TOYS EACH MONTH!

Each month hidden in four advertisements are small Toy Trader logos (not the words, but the little characters popping out of our logo). When you find all four of the hidden logos, fax, mail, or E-mail the names of the four advertisements you found them in, along with your name, address and phone number to our advertising office. One reader each month will be selected from among the correct entries to win a $100 credit that you can use with any of the advertisers in that particular issue of Toy Trader.

Money Back Guarantee
If at any time you are not completely satisfied with Toy Trader you may cancel your subscription and receive a full refund on all unmailed issues.

❑ YES! Start my 1 year subscription (12 issues) to Toy Trader for only $15.75. HBBC97

CVA GRADING/PRICE CHART

Grading comics is an objective art. This grading guide outlines the many conditions you should look for when purchasing comics, from the highest grade and top condition to the lowest collectible grade and condition. Your own comics will fall into one of these categories. A more complete description and our comments on comics grades can be found inside. We would like to point out, however, that no reader or advertiser is required to follow this or any other standard. All prices in Comics Values Annual are for comics in Near Mint condition. Happy collecting!

Mint: Perfect, pristine, devoid of any trace of wear or printing or handling flaws. Covers must be fully lustrous with sharply pointed corners. No color fading. Must be well centered. Many "rack" comics are not "Mint" even when new.

Near Mint: Almost perfect with virtually no wear. No significant printing flaws. Covers must be essentially lustrous with sharp corners. Spine is a tight as new. In older comics, minimal color fading is acceptable, as is slight aging of the paper. Most price guides, including CVA, quote prices in this grade.

Very Fine: Well preserved, still pleasing in appearance. Small signs of wear, most particularly around the staples. Most luster is readily visible. Corners may no longer be sharp, but are not rounded. Typical of a comic read only a few times and then properly stored.

Fine: Clean, presentable, with noticeable signs of wear. Some white may show through enamel around staples, and moderate rounding of corners. No tape or writing damage. Book still lies flat.

Very Good: A well worn reading copy with some minor damage such as creasing, small tears or cover flaking. Some discoloration may be evident, with obvious wear around the staples. Little luster remains, and some rolling of the spine may be seen when comic is laid flat on the table.

Good: A fully intact comic with very heavy wear. Tears, cover creases and flaking, and rolled spine will all be evident. No tape repairs present. Only very scarce or valuable issues are collected in this state.

The adjoining price table shows the prices for the other collectible grades which correspond to any "near mint" price given in this book.
